Field Team Communication

Standard Operating Procedure

Purpose:

This SOP defines how the Operations Team at Woldenga Property Services communicates with field team members through Slack regarding cleaning services, schedules, requests, updates, and concerns.

The goal is to ensure field-related communication is clear, professional, and properly documented, with the appropriate follow-ups and confirmations done when required.

Scope:

- This SOP applies to Operations Team members communicating with the Field Team.
- It covers communication standards for cleaning-related updates, requests, schedule clarifications, follow-ups, announcements, last-minute changes, and escalations.
- All field team communication must take place through Slack and within the appropriate channel.

Standard

1. Slack Communication Channels

Use Slack for all work-related communication with the field team.

Field team members, including Market Managers and housekeeping professionals, have dedicated Slack channels for direct communication and coordination.

These channels provide a centralized space for sharing operational updates, important announcements, questions, and field-related communication, while ensuring that information is shared only with the appropriate team members.

Use the Appropriate Channel

Send messages to the channel where the communication belongs.

This includes:

- Housekeeping San Diego - general announcements and updates for San Diego housekeeping professionals
- Housekeeping Temecula – general announcements or updates for Temecula housekeeping professionals
- Private Housekeeping Professional Channel - each housekeeping professional has a dedicated private channel for communication related to their cleans, scheduling, operational updates, instructions, follow-ups, and other matters directly related to their assignments.

Important: When asking a specific member for information or confirmation in a channel, mention them in the message.

Keep Communication in Slack

Field-related communication should not take place through:

- Personal messaging applications
- Personal phone messages or calls
- Other non-company communication tools
- Private Slack messages when the matter belongs in a shared channel

If a housekeeping professional sends an operational concern or a confidential matter through a private message, redirect the conversation to the appropriate Slack channel and respond with this spiel:

> Hi [Name],
> As per company policy, all work-related concerns should be communicated through your private Slack channel. This includes anything related to your schedule, cleanings, assignments, property updates, supplies, access, instructions, questions, follow-ups, and other operational matters related to your work.
> For everyone's visibility and proper documentation, please keep these communications in your private Slack channel so the appropriate team members can see, track, and assist with your concerns.
> The only exceptions are sensitive or confidential matters that need to be directed to Micah, our CEO, or accounting and payment-related matters, which should be sent to [redacted].
> For any other work-related communication sent outside of these designated channels, unfortunately, we cannot assist with or address the concern.

2. Structuring Field Team Messages

Keep messages clear, complete, and easy to follow through.

- When providing an instruction or update, include:
- What changed or happened
- What action is required
- Who needs to take action
- When it needs to be completed
- Relevant cleaning or property details
- Whether confirmation is required

Communication Standards

Always keep your tone professional and respectful. Make each message clear, specific, and focused on the required action or the next step.

Avoid:

- Demanding language
- Accusatory wording
- Passive-aggressive remarks
- Dismissive responses

If a situation requires an apology, acknowledge the issue and apologize professionally.
The goal is to resolve the concern while maintaining a professional working relationship with the field team.

Keep Related Information Together

Send related instructions or questions in one organized message whenever possible.

Avoid sending information as several separate or fragmented messages, as important details may be overlooked in a stream of messages.

When responding to a housekeeping professional's inquiry in a channel:

- Reply within the existing thread to maintain the context and keep the conversation flow.
- Mention the appropriate housekeeping professional in your response.
- Start a new message for a new topic.
- Avoid mixing unrelated topics in the same thread.

Set the Expected Response

The response required from the housekeeping professionals depends on the type of message you send out.

- Requests or Instructions
  If you are asking a housekeeping professional to complete a specific action, clearly request confirmation so you know the message has been read, acknowledged, and accepted for completion.

- Questions
  Ask the complete question in one organized message and include all the information that the housekeeping professional needs to respond.

- Notifications or General Updates

  If no action is required, a written response is not always necessary.

3. Follow-Ups and Clean Completion

Follow-ups help ensure that assigned requests are not missed and that cleaning-related actions are completed within the required timeframe.

Communication

When you're waiting for a response from a housekeeping professional, ensure that you give them a reasonable amount of time to reply.

- Allow at least [redacted] before sending an initial follow-up when a response is needed.
- If there's still no response after [redacted], send another follow-up as applicable to the situation.

Important: Urgent or time-sensitive cleans may require more immediate response and action.

Clean Completion

If you sent a specific request for the clean, follow up before the housekeeping professional leaves the property to confirm that the requested action was completed.

If you don't receive the expected check-out notification:

1. Follow up with the housekeeping professional.
2. Confirm whether the clean has been completed.
3. If the housekeeping professional remains unresponsive, call them directly.

4. Escalate the concern if you are still unable to confirm the clean status.

4. Schedule Changes and Last-Minute Requests

The Operations Team handles field communication for last-minute bookings or schedule changes when the Scheduler is unavailable.

For an existing assignment:

1. Contact the originally assigned housekeeping professional.
2. Confirm their schedule and expected cleaning ETA.
3. Communicate the change, requested timing, and any additional instructions.
4. Confirm whether the assigned housekeeping professional can accommodate the request.
5. If they can't, contact another available housekeeping professional.
6. Confirm the final arrangement and communicate any relevant updates to the newly assigned housekeeping professional.

When communicating a schedule change, include:

- Updated schedule
- Required action
- Specific instructions
- Expectations
- Relevant property or clean details

Important: Never assume a schedule change has been accepted. Always get confirmation from the housekeeping professional, especially when action is required.

5. Unresponsive Housekeeping Professionals and Escalation

You may escalate a housekeeping professional when you're not able to get the required information or confirmation after making a series of follow-ups.

Before escalating an unresponsive housekeeping professional:

1. Send the required follow-up message.
2. Allow ample time for a response based on the urgency.
3. Call the housekeeping professional directly, if they remain unresponsive.
4. If the issue is still unresolved and the housekeeping professional is still unresponsive, communicate the escalation in the Operations Channel.

When escalating, include enough information for the team and Director of Operations to understand:

- The property or clean case involved
- What happened
- Attempts made to contact the housekeeping professional
- Current status or the last status tracked
- Required intervention or next action

Compliance

Failure to follow this SOP may result in corrective guidance.
